

Governance Diversity Within Arts Organisations Seminar

9.30am - 12noon (Dates/Locations shown below)

Welcome to our seminar on diversity in governance of arts organisations.

Board diversity is a mixed bag: Arts Boards generally have a good gender balance, and are inclusive of older people, arts consumers and LGBTI people, but many lack representation by young people, people with disability, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people, and people from culturally and linguistically diverse communities. (Australia Council. Arts & Culture Governance Report)

This seminar will present evidence from surveys into diversity in arts governance in Australia, along with a business case, benefits and impact for creating more diverse boards and committees of management. Once the business case has been established the presenter will outline key actions that may be taken by Boards and Committees to improve diversity in governance and leadership.

This seminar has been designed for board or committee members and CEO's in a belief that for arts organisations to incorporate diversity in the workplace then first the Board should set an example through implementation of its own diversity policy.

Seminars in Tasmania have been scheduled for the following dates and locations.

Launceston: 15th June 2021

Hobart: 17th June 2021

Presenter for these seminars is John Coxon, founder of art4u.australia, a consulting agency helping arts organisations to remain viable. John has more than two decades experience working with boards and management team in non-profit organisations in Australia and New Zealand guiding governance best practice, strategic planning, capacity & capability planning and operations.

Register now for your place at a seminar. Places limited to 50 people at each seminar. Venues will be selected for their ability to meet social distancing rules. It is recommended both the Chairperson and CEO attend, along with a maximum of one other board member.
